FOR OUR DEALER PARTNERS

Every 4-person meeting pod we offer, in one guide.

A 4-person meeting pod is big enough for team catch-ups, client meetings and hybrid calls, but small enough to fit in a corner of an open-plan floor – often the quickest way to add meeting space without building a new room.

Pods are ordered by price level, from budget to premium. Each pod has its key features and specification, followed by a side-by-side comparison, colours and finishes, and what we need to quote.

Acoustics explained

Every pod is quoted with its speech level reduction in decibels, measured to ISO 23351-1. Around 30 dB puts a normal speaking voice below the level of the surrounding office at one metre from the pod. These 4-person meeting pods sit between 28.9 and 30.3 dB.

Price bands (£ to ££££) reflect the range rather than the individual pod. Contact us for dealer pricing on any project.

BUYING GUIDE

How to choose a 4-person meeting pod.

01
Count the people
Most team catch-ups and client calls involve two to four people, which makes a 4-person pod the most popular size. If meetings regularly run to five or more, go for one of our larger meeting pods.

02
Check the floor space
Our 4-person pods take around three square metres, from 2150 × 1390mm up to 2356 × 1456mm. Allow room for the door to open and a clear walkway – we check this at the site survey.

03
Decide how private it needs to be
All four reduce speech by 28.9–30.3dB. For HR, legal or client meetings, the HushFree M has one of our highest ratings at 30.3dB.

04
Plan for hybrid meetings
For video meetings, ask about screen mounts and extra power. Tell us how your team meets and we will recommend the right set-up.

05
Match the budget and lead time
The MusePod MD 3 is one of the best-value 4-person pods on the market, the HushMeet sits in the middle, and the HushFree M and Bubliing L are premium. Lead times run from around six to twelve weeks.

06
Compare every size
See our meeting pods guide at silentcollective.co.uk/meeting-pods to compare all 13 of our meeting pods, or design your 4-person pod in 3D and send us the spec for a quote.
